'So Big' Star Surrounds Self With Oldtimers

Jane Wyman is a gal who likes to be around people who "knew her when."

Which is a good thing for the star who today rates as one of the screen's top dramatic actresses and most versatile performers. Otherwise she'd be mighty unhappy because everybody from the cops at the gate to the set workers have watched her grow in stature from leggy chorus dancer to Academy Award winner.

Of the entire crew assigned to her new picture "So Big," only three members never before had worked on a film with her. Par for the outfit was six Wyman pictures, and some of the veterans proudly claimed twice that many.

"The longer they've been with me," Jane said, "the better I like them. Old friends like old shoes, are the most comfortable. I want to feel at home on a set and it's more relaxing and conducive to good working results when everybody else feels the same way."

One thing Jane doesn't like for an old-timer to do is to go formal on her.

"They can call me Janie or Jane," she said, "but when they call me Miss Wyman they'd better smile!"

Actress Plays Self in Difficult Scene

Allyn McLerie recalled a personal experience of a few years ago to play convincingly a scene with Doris Day in Technicolor musical "Calamity Jane," in which she is supposed to freeze up completely in her singing debut.

Miss McLerie did exactly that in real life when as a chorus girl she was given a few lines to sing in a New York show. However, the talented dancer did make good as a singer later. In fact, on her 19th birthday she took over the leading role in the Broadway production.

Keel Passes the Buck

Howard Keel has a unique way of proving that his daughters are dearer and dearer to him with each passing year. Keel gifts the girls with crisp new dollar bills on their birthdays, one for each year.

Town Gets Holiday to Gaze at Stars

The town of Cuautla in Mexico got an official holiday when the "Blowing Wild" troupe, headed by Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, Ruth Roman and Anthony Quinn, started location lensing there.

Stores, schools and public buildings were closed at the request of the mayor so the populace could see the stars perform before the cameras. Only ones working in the town were policemen, who were busy keeping the crowds from overrunning the set.

Sparks Flying on Wayne Set

John Wayne, one of the world's most famous horsemen, knows everything about horses except how to shoe them.

He learned that recently when a Los Angeles blacksmith was flown down to Camargo, Mexico, where Wayne was working in "Hondo." Smithy showed the actor how to operate a forge and nail shoes on horses for a scene in the 3-D picture.

Wyman in Silent Offstage Role

It happened on the "So Big" set where Jane Wyman has been playing Selina De-Jong in the picturization of the Edna Ferber classic.

A number of extra players were waiting to do a street scene with Miss Wyman. The time was noon and appetites were stirring.

"I wish Miss Wyman would get here so we could shoot this scene and go to lunch," one player remarked to the plainly dressed farm woman who was quietly knitting next to her. The woman just smiled back.

"We're ready for you now, Janie," director Robert Wise called.

The little farm woman put down her knitting and stepped before the camera.

The surprised extra, realizing she had been talking to Miss Wyman, gasped, "Have I got egg on my face!"

Wayward Bus on Road to "Hondo"

To reach a location site for "Hondo," the film company cut a seven-mile road through the desert outside of Camargo, Mexico.

Two days after its completion the troupe was surprised to encounter a rattletrap Mexican bus maneuvering the new road. It seems the bus company had decided it was a better route than the one they had been using.

Is There a Difference?

David Butler, who has directed seven Doris Day starrers with the latest being the Technicolor musical "Calamity Jane," has this to say about the blond actress: "I still am unable to decide whether Doris has a wholesome sexiness or a sexy wholesomeness. In either case she has a perfect blending of these two desirable feminine qualities, which helps to explain her tremendous appeal to all members of an audience."

Movie Men Whistle While They Work

Gams that can draw a chorus of whistles when clad in cotton stockings must be tops in curves and contours, and Jane Wyman's are just that.

Jane gave the boys on the set of "So Big" an unscheduled fright and treat when a horse hitched to a farm wagon into which she was climbing started ahead of cue. To avoid a tumble the star hoisted her long skirt above her knees and scrambled into the wagon. Cotton stockings and all, the legs that have often been acclaimed as Hollywood's loveliest got a rousing whistle accolade.

Farmer Reaps Riches From Movie Company

At least one Mexican farmer is considerably richer as a result of a Hollywood location company.

Director John Farrow, recently at Camargo, Mexico, to film "Hondo," made a contract with the lucky farmer for the feeding of the more than 200-head of livestock used in the production. The movie company spent more than two months at the site.
